After eight years, we are happy that so many of you have made Wu Liang Ye your priority. We always understand that the tidiness of the food, the service and the food, are key buttons that differentiate great restaurants. Throughout this time, we have been working to excel in all of them. Last year, we even closed the restaurant for a while, and invited a famous Chinese artistic designer to help renovate the whole restaurant. We want you to be 100% satisfied with everything about your take-out order - from how your call was taken to the demeanor of the delivery boy. If you are unhappy in any way, please let us know. If there is a problem with our food or our service, we will correct it. We have worked hard to earn your trust and we are prepared to work even harder to keep it. That's our promise.

As always, we will continue improving our menu. Once in a while, our chefs would visit Sichuan and bring back the fashionable dishes. So please remember to check out our specials from time to time. Enjoy our food, enjoy your life. That's our attitude.

By the way, in response to an increasing demand for healthy food, we have added House Special Sauce to the Light Cuisine section and also a couple of Sichuan delicacies in the Appetizer section, please do not hesitate to let us know that you truly enjoy them. That's our assurance.

One more thing, if you are a newcomer to authentic Sichuan style food, we suggest you start with our Wu Liang Ye's Signature section, each one of them will not let you down. That's our pride.

All in all, it is a great honor to be part of this community and we sincerely appreciate your support!

Mangia to my Nineties Sichuan...Sungray.
Gad Greene, NY Magazine (Dec. 11, 1991)

Here are the retruzal twists and turns that excited us in the first place. In some ways, this food even goes beyond what we once knew.

"Chinese heaven is hot, hot, hot" according to fans who find nirvana at these "spicy" Sichuan shops.

Zagat, The New York Post (Dec. 20, 1998)

"Sichuan cooks relight the fire." In Sichuan, whole dried red chili pods and blistering fresh green ones heat many a dish, but the characteristic seasoning is a spice known as Sichuan peppercorn. Its almost cooling hint of anise, combined with its slightly numbing effect on the palate, actually balances and tempers most dishes. It delivers flavors as much as heat.

Florence Fabricant, The New York Times (Dec. 6, 2000)

Wu Liang Ye

Authentic Sichuan Cuisine

"Wu Liang Ye offers Sichuan dishes notable for freshness and meticulous preparation."
Babich, The New York Times (Mar. 9, 1995)

"For anybody weaned by the heavy, gloppy fare served at many Chinese takeout mills, Wu Liang Ye may reawaken the dormant appreciation of Chinese food."
Eric Asanov, The New York Times (July 11, 1997)
